STORY OF THE PLAY

Those wild and lovable hill folk, the Hawleys, decide to pay a surprise visit on their distant cousin, Charles “Chicory” Seabury, and his snobbish wife, Josephine. As far as Josephine is concerned, they couldn’t have picked a worse time as she is planning an exclusive reception for Princess Ann. After unsuccessfully trying to get rid of the visitors, Josephine decides they’ll have to attend charm school—and what a scene that is! When that fails, she locks them in their rooms.

But the clever hillbillies, led by Gram Hawley, are not so easily put off. When they attend the reception, Bubba shows how he can waddle like an alligator! Besides the ruined reception, Josephine has another problem; someone has stolen a priceless jewel, the Star of Iceland. Could it be one of her society friends?

Charles has his problems, too - mostly with the Internal Revenue Service. And Cindy Lou is falling for a handsome house painter, and Alice thinks she’s an airplane. By the time this absolutely hilarious farce comes to an end, the Hawleys have solved all problems. Even the Princess is delighted. The action is inspired lunacy.

ACT I
Scene 1

(Prior to Lights up: SOUND of construction from the Blue Room. HAMMERS banging. AT RISE: JOSEPHINE is stretched out on the sofa reading a fashion magazine. It's a lovely day, so the French doors stand open. The noise continues. Josephine is annoyed, looks SL.)

JOSEPHINE: How am I to think, much less concentrate, with all that noise?

(VICTORIA enters USC from SL. She carries flowers for arranging.)

VICTORIA: Did you say something, Mrs. Seabury? (SHE steps to the URC table and sticks a few more flowers into the vase.)

JOSEPHINE: That noise! It's giving me a headache. Ask them to stop.

VICTORIA: Yes, Mrs. Seabury. (SHE puts the flowers down and crosses into the Blue Room.)

JOSEPHINE: I've been patient. But there are limits. (TELEPHONE RINGS) Now what? (SHE sits up and tosses the magazine aside. Telephone continues to ring. Hammering continues, too.) This mansion has become an absolute madhouse. Someone answer the telephone! (LESTER enters USC from SL, wearing dark jacket, bow tie, white gloves. JOSEPHINE stands and paces nervously in front of the sofa, hands to her ears.) Hammers banging, buckets falling, workmen in and out, telephones ringing.

(LESTER steps to telephone, picks it up.)

LESTER: Seabury residence. (Listens, covers the mouthpiece) It's those people from the television station again, Mrs. Seabury.

(Sound of BANGING stops.)

JOSEPHINE: What?

LESTER: The television people. They want to verify the time of the Princess' reception.

JOSEPHINE: Later, later, Lester.

LESTER: Yes, Mrs. Seabury.

JOSEPHINE: I'm expected to do everything myself. It's a burden a society leader must bear.

LESTER: Mrs. Seabury will be in touch. Thank you for calling the Seabury Mansion. (Hangs up) Will there be anything else, Mrs. Seabury?

JOSEPHINE: I have a splitting headache. Get me an aspirin.

LESTER: Regular or double strength?

JOSEPHINE: Double.

LESTER: At once, Mrs. Seabury.

(LESTER exits USL, VICTORIA returns.)

VICTORIA: I told them to stop, Mrs. Seabury. I don't think he liked it.

JOSEPHINE: Who?

VICTORIA: The foreman.

JOSEPHINE: I'm not paying him to like it. I'm paying him to finish the job.

(JOE enters from Blue Room. He wears painter's work overalls which are spattered generously with fresh paint, and a painter's hat. He carries paint bucket in one hand and a paintbrush in the other.)

JOE: That's what I'm trying to do, Mrs. Seabury. But I can't finish the job if you keep telling me to stop. We're already falling behind.

JOSEPHINE: What!?

(VICTORIA returns to the flowers, and when she is done with them, exits USL.)

Hillbilly Reunion

JOE: I said we're falling behind.

JOSEPHINE: The Blue Room must be ready for Princess Ann's reception. You mustn't fall behind!

JOE: Then, please, stop interfering. Even the carpenters are complaining.

JOSEPHINE: How dare you speak to me in that fashion. You—you—you—

JOE: Painter.

JOSEPHINE: Yes...thank you...Painter.

(LOIS FONTAINE enters from Blue Room. She's a cheerful and pleasant young woman. She wears a smock.)

LOIS: Let me handle this, Joe. You get back to work.

JOE: She's all yours. You're welcome to her.

(JOSEPHINE gasps. JOE returns to Blue Room.)

JOSEPHINE: Did you hear what he just said, Miss Fontaine? He's so rude. It's a sign of the times. It's difficult for a woman of my social standing to get the respect she deserves.

LOIS: We're all under a bit of a strain. I'll keep the noise to a minimum.

JOSEPHINE: I'd appreciate that. I have such sensitive nerves.

(LESTER returns with a glass of water on a tray.)

LESTER: Your aspirin, Mrs. Seabury. Double strength.

JOSEPHINE: I've changed my mind. I don't want it.

LESTER: Very good, Mrs. Seabury. (Unnoticed by JOSEPHINE, he takes the aspirin and washes it down with a sip of water. Exits USL.)

JOSEPHINE: (Grabs LOIS by the wrist) Miss Fontaine, you're the best young interior decorator in town. I'm counting on you. Don't let me down.

LOIS: There's nothing to worry about, Mrs. Seabury. The Blue Room will be ready.
