DEDICATION

For Dean Scofield, my dearest confidant ... my encourager.

STORY OF THE PLAY

This richly-textured play weaves the dark energy of one of Shakespeare's most intense plays with compelling, current-day characters and problems.

Andreya, a selfish student who gets what she wants by being manipulative and cruel, is affronted when she doesn't get the lead female role for the school's production of "Othello." Instead the part of Desdemona goes to Miranda, a quiet but talented teen whose dysfunctional family has kept her out of many school activities. The part of Othello goes to Aaron, a well-rounded and popular student.

As the rehearsals progress, Andreya devises a payback. Like Shakespeare's character Iago, she uses the love that springs up between Othello and Desdemona, in this case Aaron and Miranda, to try to destroy them. However, in this play Othello is redeemed by not being completely hoodwinked by Iago and drawing the line at actual murder. And Andreya is ultimately undone.

TIME

The play is approximately an hour and a half long. It can be performed with or without an intermission. A range of music is needed from light and romantic to dark and threatening. There is no need to close the curtains between acts/ scenes: quickly timed scene changes with the appropriate “foreshadowing” music works very well.

SFX: Include school bell, announcements, phone dial tone, phone ringing, and answering machine message.

ACT I

Scene 1

(AT RISE: A busy school hallway as a school bell is heard. A poster advertising the upcoming audition of the school play, "Othello," is in plain view. Several STUDENTS cross DS; some general murmurs are heard, looks given, books carried, etc.)

ANDREYA: (Entering while looking in a compact and reapplying lip gloss. SHE carries herself as if she owns the world. She tosses a snotty look at two girls who almost get in her way. She stops when she notices the poster and reads it. Thinking aloud.) Hmm ... "Othello." That will be perfect for me. (TAMARA approaches while saying goodbye to someone on a cell phone.) There you are. Timeliness has never been your fashion, has it?

TAMARA: (Tired of the lecture, yet not willing to cause a problem.) I'll work on it. (Sees ANDREYA motion toward the poster.) Oh, "Othello." Shakespeare. You love Shakespeare. "Othello" ... who's the female lead in that play?

ANDREYA: Desdemona.

TAMARA: Oh, that's right. The chick who gets that great death scene. Beautiful. I take it you want?

ANDREYA: I want. (SHE laughs.)

TAMARA: What are you laughing at? You're up to something, aren't you?

ANDREYA: Well, remember the fall play ...

TAMARA: "The Odd Couple"? Two male leads ... um hm.

ANDREYA: Yeah, well, I just happened to casually mention to Ms. Meyers that I hoped she would consider the female talent.

TAMARA: (Interrupting with enthusiasm.) The great female talent.

ANDREYA: Yes, the great female talent in the school before deciding her spring play.

ANDREYA: (Continued.) After all, it would be a ... a travesty to have a complaint made about the sexism in the drama department. It could just cast a shadow of doubt that I'm sure Ms. Meyers just doesn't want to deal with.

TAMARA: Oh, you are so evil, but so good. (THEY high-five each other.) Having Daddy as a school board member helps, huh?

ANDREYA: Yeah. (Smiling.)

TAMARA: Hey, you're thinking the lead is yours ... hands down.

ANDREYA: Correct.

TAMARA: And what if I want to go for it?

ANDREYA: Not advised.

TAMARA: (Challenging.) Is that so?

ANDREYA: (Steely.) That's so.

TAMARA: (Backing down, takes a big breath.) Well, I hope there's another role worth tackling.

ANDREYA: There is. Emilia.

TAMARA: Emilia? Who's she?

ANDREYA: My gentlewoman.

TAMARA: You mean, your servant? I'm going to play your servant?

ANDREYA: That tone is not necessary. Oh, come on. It's a great role. You get to be killed by your husband. It's cool.

TAMARA: I get to die onstage?

ANDREYA: Absolutely.

TAMARA: All right, then. (Looking again at the poster.) Interesting, the auditions are tonight. Not like letting us know with a space. I'm going to have to cancel my date with Rick.

ANDREYA: (Amused.) Rick? Did I get the ask?

TAMARA: Drea, you finished with him over a month ago. I thought he was fair game by now.

ANDREYA: Has it been a month? Oh, a month is cool; no permission needed. I'll have to cancel my nails. Pick you up at six? (Notices TAMARA'S eyes motioning and sees AARON approaching.)

AARON: Ladies, the air is thick ... what have you been up to?

ANDREYA: (In a mock falsetto.) Oh, you do us wrong, good sir. The innocent are always maligned ... what a pity. (SHE laughs.) Hey, coming to the audition tonight?

AARON: Tonight?

TAMARA: Tonight at seven.

AARON: Wow, nothing like a little notice. (Looking at the poster.)

ANDREYA: (Closing in on HIM.) You'd make a perfect Othello to my Desdemona. Just think, you'd get to kiss me and then kill me.

AARON: The offer is too tempting to say no. Sign me up. Hey, how do you know you're going to be Desdemona?

TAMARA: Ms. Meyers owes her a favor.

AARON: (Quoting Troilus and Cressida.) "All is lechery, (ANDREYA joins in.) war and lechery."

ANDREYA: Yeah, something like that. (ANDREYA notices MIRANDA looking at the poster since they have moved SL of it. She addresses TAMARA.) Look. (Clears HER throat as she crosses to poster.) Can we help you?

MIRANDA: No ... I was just looking at the audition poster.

ANDREYA: (Snide.) "Othello." It's Shakespeare.

MIRANDA: I know that.

(AARON begins to pull ANDREYA away but she shakes him off.)

ANDREYA: Oh, you do? Well, then, why don't you come to the audition tonight. I'm sure that you would do great. I mean, you do have some acting experience, don't you?

MIRANDA: Well, I was in a church play a year ago.

TAMARA: A church play? (Laughs with ANDREYA.)

AARON: (Feeling the need to rescue this shy girl.) Is it Marcie?

MIRANDA: Miranda.

AARON: I'm Aaron.

MIRANDA: I know.

AARON: Oh, well, Miranda, listen, don't pay them any attention. "Othello" is a great play ... and you don't have to have experience to audition.
