DEDICATION

To the students who turn words on a page into theatrical reality.

STORY OF THE PLAY

The townspeople having been living in their quiet Spanish village for centuries under the hechizo, avoiding aging, disease, and death. But when Tomaso decides to leave after Rosita denies him, the spell is broken. The Eights come again, offering protection in exchange for the death of one of the villagers -- one that is selected by the townspeople themselves. Two Americans have unexpectedly arrived and are invited to stay at the inn, drink the wine, take part in the fiesta, and cast their votes. While Papa tries to unite the village, jealous Obella has her own agenda. They must decide if one of the American strangers should go or one of their own. But when the votes are cast and Rosita is selected, the villagers finally listen to reason, understanding that they are not truly alive until they know that each day may be their last day. Choosing to accept what it means to live, the villagers celebrate their new freedom as Rosita finds an adventure. Full evening.

ACT I

(AT RISE: It is morning. ROSITA is reading alone on stage, sitting on a bench under a tree down left. TOMASO enters carrying a knapsack over one shoulder. He sees Rosita, pauses, then moves quickly to her.)

ROSITA: Tomaso! You startled me.

TOMASO: Rosita.

ROSITA: Tomaso! What is that you are carrying?

TOMASO: I am leaving today, Rosita. (Sits.)

ROSITA: What do you mean, "you are leaving"? You make no sense.

TOMASO: It is for you that I did come by.

ROSITA: Yes?

TOMASO: I came to you because I knew you would understand.

ROSITA: What?

TOMASO: Rosita, I can't be here anymore. I am leaving here today -- this morning. It is something I must do.

ROSITA: Do? What must you do, Tomaso?

TOMASO: I am leaving.

ROSITA: Leaving? (Pause.) You know what you are saying?

TOMASO: Rosita...

ROSITA: I don't understand why you are saying this, why you are saying you are leaving!

TOMASO: Rosita...I'll die if I stay here!

ROSITA: And I'll die if you go! Tomaso, the whole town will die if you go!

TOMASO: That's just some old wives' tale.

ROSITA: It's not. You know it's true! Tomaso, we've been blessed for all of these years, because of The Eights—

TOMASO: (Rising.) The Eights! The Eights! I don't want to hear about The Eights—

ROSITA: And now you want to jeopardize everything just because you're a little unhappy today? Remember Enrique? We found him dead on the bridge that morning. Let my papa talk to you. Papa is good at putting things into perspective. (Calling.) Papa!

TOMASO: (Covering HER mouth and speaking in hushed tones.) You do not listen! Rosita! If I stay, I will die! I'm going crazy. I'm like a bird trapped in a cage and the cage is too small and I'm suffocating. Don't you see? I will kill someone if I stay here or kill myself. Rosita, please. Of everyone here, you are the only one to understand. You do understand, don't you?

(ROSITA nods. She touches TOMASO's hand and he releases it.)

ROSITA: I hear you, Tomaso, my friend. But you make me sad...and scared. I want to scream. (As TOMASO's hand come up SHE stops it.) But I won't scream.

TOMASO: And you won't tell?

ROSITA: Tell? They will all know soon enough.... If this is something you must do, then God save us all. I knew a day like this would come, when the spell would be broken. I will pray for you, Tomaso.

TOMASO: If there is some way to let you know I'm safe I will try to reach you.

ROSITA: Or come back if you find the grass not so green on the other side.

TOMASO: I will.

ROSITA: Be careful.

TOMASO: Sure. I'm not afraid.

ROSITA: I will be afraid for the both of us.

(ROSITA takes her kerchief and gives it to TOMASO.)

TOMASO: You honor me. I will wear this next to my heart, Rosita, if I may be so bold.

(TOMASO steps back, still looking at Rosita. Then, grabbing his knapsack and slinging it over his shoulder he crosses quickly to the bridge and is gone. SFX: A rooster is heard, then silence. ROSITA stares off in the direction of the bridge then goes back to her book as PAPA enters from café. He looks at the sky and stretches, then turns, grabs a table against the café wall and sets it out on the terrace in front. He sees Rosita and crosses to her.)

PAPA: And how is my little princess?

ROSITA: (Concentrating on book.) Fine, Papa.

PAPA: Is this the book I sent away for you?

ROSITA: (Frowning.) Yes, Papa.

PAPA: Well, we mustn't disturb the princess and her studies.

(MAMA emerges from the café and scowls at her family. She stands in front of the doorway.)

ROSITA: It is for pleasure that I am reading, Papa.

PAPA: But you make it look like such work. (Laughs.)

MAMA: That's right, laugh. Laugh while there is so much yet to be done. Laugh while Mama does all the work. She is used to it. (Calling back into café.) Domingo! Get your lazy behind out of bed!

PAPA: A laugh is not such a bad way to start the day. (Crossing back.)

MAMA: I'll laugh. I'll laugh when you are cold in the ground.

PAPA: Mama!

(PAPA exits into inn. MAMA moves to table and dumps tablecloths on it. She stops and speaks to ROSITA.)

MAMA: And you? Like a bump you sit there! You can't fold the napkins or help your brother in the kitchen?

ROSITA: Mama, I'm reading.

MAMA: You. You are always reading. What good will come of that?

ROSITA: Please, Mama, Cleopatra has just been presented to Caesar.

MAMA: Caesar. I know no Caesar. I know only Rosita. A lazy girl who can't help her family prepare for the day.

(PAPA and DOMINGO enter from cafe. Domingo hangs his head and scratches.)
