Murder at the Book Club

*Dedicated to my talented, gorgeous wife —
wit, writer, editor, teacher, best friend, love of my life —
Gretchen Havens, otherwise known as My Sweet Gretchy.*

STORY OF THE PLAY

This is one club where members' lives are not an open book! Tonight's meeting of the Queen Anne Murder Mystery Book Club takes a dark twist when a threatening telephone call sets the group on edge. Suddenly all the lights go out and gentle Nellie is murdered. But who is the killer...and why? Do those eerie masks mounted on the wall or that unusual hanging mobile mean anything special? And then a rock with a message attached is thrown against the house jolting everyone even further. Inspector McAdoo follows the clues but soon another murder takes place. Accusations and tensions escalate leading to a thrilling climax.

Colorful characters and sparkling clues ingeniously hidden in plain sight will keep your audiences enthralled until the final reveal.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

(Cast of 10: 5 m, 5 w)

ROGER ALMQUIST: Black jacket and pants. Cynical.

LIVIA CHAMBLISS: Hat, scarf, mismatched socks, sandals.

Eccentric.

NELLIE MERTZ: Modest clothing. Prim.

GLADYS DAVENPORT: Revealing dress. Romantic.

PAULY SMITHERS: Bold jacket. Joker.

JAY BABCOCK: Neutral clothing. Glasses. Anxious.

WANDA GORKA: Slacks, blouse. Blunt.

DOMINIKA GORKA: Slacks, blouse. Blunt.

KENNETH SPELVIN: Coveralls, work boots. Rustic.

INSPECTOR MCADOO: Uniform, wig. Offbeat and intense.

The characters' ages are mixed, 30s to 60s.

TIME

An evening in fall, 1947.

SETTING

Livia's home in the affluent Queen Anne neighborhood of Seattle. The living room has several chairs and a sofa, a desk, lamps, and small tables. There is a bar with a small refrigerator, brandy, and forks, plates, glasses etc. One wall is decorated with about 12 somewhat creepy masks. Collection should include Pierrette and Pierrot masks and a bejeweled Harlequin mask with three emerald stones on the forehead. The other masks vary, such as clown, witch, animal and Commedia dell'arte. However, each gives the impression that they are staring. There is also a hanging mobile of objects incorporating a vampire bat, a model airplane, and a wax carrot. On the walls are at least four paintings including a fairy from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a sports painting with a baseball bat, a nature painting with a bird, and finally a painting with a bicycle. A coat rack is near the French doors. A tall, filled bookcase swings out like a door, revealing a secret passage behind it.

ACT I

(AT RISE: ROGER ALMQUIST, alone in the living room, reads aloud from the novel "Murder Every Friday.")

ROGER: "So, as if on cue, the clock struck midnight and Lady Angelica pulled the lever opening the secret trap door...and Sir Tobias Beck plunged to his death on the jagged rocks below."

(SFX: A sudden boom of thunder and crack of lightning. LIVIA CHAMBLISS enters on her push scooter.)

LIVIA: Just now finishing tonight's novel, Roger?

ROGER: Re-reading the final paragraph. I always like it when the central character is triumphant.

LIVIA: As do I.

ROGER: I also like secret doors and aristocracy.

LIVIA: Who doesn't? (SHE moves to a cake on the table, slices it.)

ROGER: That knife looks sharp.

LIVIA: And...?

ROGER: You could easily murder me.

LIVIA: My motivation?

ROGER: Just for fun.

LIVIA: Don't you want a slice of cake?

ROGER: Did you lace it with poison?

LIVIA: You are devilish, dear boy.

ROGER: I try.

(SFX: Another crack of lightning and a roll of thunder.)

LIVIA: Goodness, a storm is coming.

ROGER: Yes, the sky is darkening.

LIVIA: Perfect atmosphere for our little group of bibliophiles.

ROGER: Indeed.

LIVIA: Roger, I think you arranged this weather.

ROGER: Oh? You think I have such powers?

LIVIA: Perhaps.

Murder at the Book Club

ROGER: Dear Livia, always wearing a hat and scarf.

LIVIA: A hat is my signature; the scarf is my trademark.

ROGER: As you might recall in "Murder at the Dude Ranch," Melanie DeVore was strangled with a scarf.

LIVIA: Melanie deserved to be murdered. I don't.

ROGER: Will you present that line of reasoning to your adversary?

LIVIA: I have no adversaries.

ROGER: We all have adversaries.

LIVIA: Although, I must confess this hat is a bit peculiar.

ROGER: Livia, all of your hats are peculiar.

(NELLIE MERTZ and GLADYS DAVENPORT enter from the hallway with cups of coffee.)

NELLIE: Was that thunder?

GLADYS: No, it was Gene Krupa playing the drums.

NELLIE: Who?

LIVIA: Gladys is teasing, as usual.

NELLIE: I was hopeful it was cannon fire and we would discover a body.

ROGER: And where would we find the body, Nellie?

NELLIE: Over there by the torchiere.

ROGER: Murdered indoors by a cannon ball? Intriguing but unlikely.

NELLIE: "If you can't convince them, confuse them."

GLADYS: That's what Harry S. Truman says.

ROGER: Truman also says: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

NELLIE: Please let's leave our president out of this and stick to mysteries.

ROGER: Harry S. Truman is a mystery.

LIVIA: My favorite mystery is "The Greenhouse Murders" in which the vicar is killed by a falling pane of glass.

ROGER: A falling pane of glass or a deliberately dropped pane?

NELLIE: As we know, the Vicar actually died of a heart attack.

LIVIA: That's a dull way to die in a mystery novel.

Murder at the Book Club

GLADYS: I like to imagine that the Vicar was gazing at the moon.

ROGER: Gladys, you belong in a romance book club, not a murder mystery group.

(GLADYS almost trips over LIVIA'S scooter.)

GLADYS: Ohhhhhh!

(ROGER steadies HER.)

ROGER: Livia, your scooter is a dangerous weapon.

NELLIE: Why can't you walk from room to room instead of careening around on that awful scooter?

LIVIA: I love my scooter. It gets me places swiftly. (Parks the scooter in a corner.)

GLADYS: Are you trying to break my neck, Livia?

LIVIA: No, but come to think of it...

NELLIE: I see a new novel: "The Push Scooter Murders."

(SFX: Thunder, lightning.)

GLADYS: Oh, just look at that sky.

LIVIA: (Singing.) "Ole buttermilk sky I'm keepin' my eye peeled on you. What's the good word tonight, are you gonna be mellow tonight?"

NELLIE: Buttermilk sky? Hardly. The sky is violent tonight and I don't like it.

(Just as JAY BABCOCK and PAULY SMITHERS enter, ROGER intentionally drops a book to the floor. It lands with a bang.)

JAY: Ow! Was that a gunshot?

PAULY: Simmer down, Jay. Get hep to the jive.

JAY: Do what?

PAULY: Be cool, man.

JAY: These modern expressions confuse me.

ROGER: I like it that you're jumpy. So much fun.
